Plato and Aristotle used moral philosophy to influence the way people actually live. Focusing on the Republic and the Nicomachean Ethics, this book examines how far they thought it could succeed in this.

The Horatian formula prodesse et delectare was extremely influential in the production of texts across various languages and genres. While indeed didactic elements can be attested to in almost any medieval text, and while medieval literature displays a range of possibilities to teach and instruct, the scope of the present volume is more closely focused on explicitly didactic literature. This volume combines contributions that analyse didactic literature in high medieval Europe from different vantage points. They open new perspectives on education as a working principle or legitimizing strategy in the heterogeneous forms of writing intended to convey knowledge. This broad thematic, linguistic and geographical scope enables us to view didactic literature as the universal phenomenon it was and prompts us to understand its influence on many aspects of society in high medieval Europe and beyond. While the contributions explore case studies predominantly from this period of transition and the expansion of the categories of knowledge, they also trace some of these developments into the later Middle Ages to spotlight the lasting influence of high medieval teaching and learning in literature. The way medieval writers combine 'the pleasant' with 'the useful' is this book's main question.

Weeds survive, entombed in the soil, for centuries. They are as persistent and pervasive as myths. They ride out ice ages, agricultural revolutions, global wars. They mark the tracks of human movements across continents as indelibly as languages. Yet to humans they are the scourge of our gardens, saboteurs of our best-laid plans. They rob crops of nourishment, ruin the exquisite visions of garden designers, and make unpleasant and impenetrable hiding places for urban ne'er-do-wells. Weeds can be destructive and troubling, but they can also be beautiful, and they are the prototypes of most of the plants that keep us alive. Humans have grappled with their paradox for thousands of years, and with characteristic verve and lyricism, Richard Mabey uncovers some of the deeper cultural reasons behind the attitudes we have to such a huge section of the plant world.

A full-color guide for both beginners and experienced composters, with an A–Z reference section Composting is fun, easy and very satisfying! You can make compost even if you live in an apartment or don't have access to a garden. There are lots of good reasons to make compost: A third to two-thirds of the average garbage can contents can be composted, so you can lighten your bin—and stop it smelling. Less organic material is sent to landfill, so less noxious liquids and greenhouse gases—especially methane—are produced. Composting saves you money—you won't need to buy any more peat-based compost! This book will give you all the information you need for successful composting.

This edited volume brings together original sociolinguistic and cultural contributions on food as an instrument to explore diasporic identities. Focusing on food practices in cross-cultural contact, the authors reveal how they can be used as a powerful vehicle for positive intercultural exchange either through conservation and the maintenance of cultural continuity, or through hybridization and the means through which migrant communities find compromise, or even consent, within the host community. Each chapter presents a fascinating range of data and new perspectives on cultures and languages in contact: from English (and some of its varieties) to Italian, German, Spanish, and to Japanese and Palauan, as well as an exemplary range of types of contact, in colonial, multicultural, and diasporic situations. The authors use a range of integrated approaches to examine how socio-linguistic food practices can, and do, contribute to identity construction in diverse transnational and diasporic contexts. The book will be of particular interest to students and scholars of translation, semiotics, cultural studies and sociolinguistics.

This book will appeal to those who have read widely on spiritual matters since it captures some of the most up-to-date information about planetary changes.

Daddy's Girl, follows the trials and tribulations of the central character, a South African girl Patricia. Born in 1957 in East London, she is beset by early parental bereavement and familial dysfunctionality. We witness her struggle, to come to terms with catastrophe after catastrophe within a society blighted by prejudice and apartheid. Set against this background, she attempts to make sense of her world whilst living within a home plagued by sexual misconduct, chronic illness, alcoholism, psychological abuse. Other stories are interwoven with Mavis's story, partly factual stories of people who touched her life, some are tales of hope, sadly many are tales of sorrow and despair. We follow her story as she and one of her sisters are taken into care. We sense Mavis's longing to go back home. The difficulties she and her sister face in experiencing sexual abuse imposed upon them by older girls. We explore Mavis's horror and confusion when introduced to the radical beliefs of the minister of the local Dutch Reformed Church. After three years, the girls return home and Mavis finds that she cannot settle at school. No-one would describe her peers at school as kind, at thirteen, she befriends an older male who introduces her to the world of psychedelic music, hallucinogenic drugs and marijuana and so her story continues.

Combining a close study of Monteverdi's secular works with recent research on late Renaissance history, Gary Tomlinson places the composer's creative career in its broad cultural context and illuminates the state of Italian music, poetry, and ideology in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

Understanding Our Mind is an accessible guide for anyone who is curious about the inner workings of the mind. Originally released as Transformation at the Base, a finalist for the 2001 Nautilus Award, this seminal work on Buddhist applied psychology features a new introduction by Dharma teacher Reb Anderson. Understanding Our Mind is based on fifty verses on the nature of consciousness taken from the great fifth-century Buddhist master Vasubandhu. With compassion and insight, Nhat Hanh reveals how these ancient teachings can be applied to the modern world. Nhat Hanh focuses on the direct experience of recognizing and embracing the nature of our feelings and perceptions. The quality of our lives, he says, depends on the quality of the seeds in our minds. Buddhism teaches us how to nourish the seeds of joy and transform the seeds of suffering so that our understanding, love, and compassion can flower.

Dopo quasi tre anni trascorsi nei panni dell'Uomo senza soldi, l'ex economista Mark Boyle non solo smonta brillantemente l'attuale sistema economico basato sul denaro e sulla finanza, ma soprattutto ci spiega che un'esistenza in cui non ce n'è traccia può essere liberatoria, genuina e praticabile. La sua riflessione parte dall'analisi della realtà finanziaria, sociale e culturale del mondo contemporaneo, attinge alla propria esperienza personale e sfocia nel rivoluzionario concetto di «economia del dono», basato sulla condivisione di tempo, competenze e abilità tra i membri della comunità. Pagina dopo pagina, scopriamo come eliminare il denaro da ogni ambito della nostra vita: casa e arredamento; alimentazione e cucina; salute e igiene personale; istruzione e tecnologia; trasporti e viaggi; tempo libero, riscaldamento ed energia... Per una comunità in cui tutti siamo interdipendenti, immersi nel flusso della vita e capaci di condividere in modo organizzato capacità, tempo, conoscenze, informazioni o beni materiali. Con numerosi contributi di esperti nel campo della permacultura, del giardinaggio, della coltivazione, dell'educazione e della condivisione, che nel perfetto spirito dell'economia del dono condividono con i lettori esperienza e sapere.

a department store slips a necklace into her purse. Whatever the situation, the characters in This Jealous Earth find themselves faced with moments of decision that will forever alter the course of their lives. Always moving and often touched with humor, Carpenter's stories examine the tension between the everyday and the transcendent—our struggle to grasp what lies beyond our reach. Whether hawking body parts in a Midwestern city, orbiting through the galleries of a Paris museum or plotting sibling tortures in an Arizona desert, his characters lead us through a series of dilemmas of universal appeal. This Jealous Earth has received praise from Publishers Weekly, The Rumpus, Gregory Blake Smith, Siri Hustvedt and has been featured on Minnesota Public Radio. The second edition features a brand new story, titled "The Bait."

Given its brevity, Plato's Meno covers an astonishingly wide array of topics: politics, education, virtue, definition, philosophical method, mathematics, the nature and acquisition of knowledge and immortality. Its treatment of these, though profound, is tantalisingly short, leaving the reader with many unresolved questions. This book confronts the dialogue's many enigmas and attempts to solve them in a way that is both lucid and sympathetic to Plato's philosophy. Reading the dialogue as a whole, it explains how different arguments are related to one another and how the interplay between characters is connected to the philosophical content of the work. In a new departure, this book's exploration focuses primarily on the content and coherence of the dialogue in its own right and not merely in the context of other dialogues, making it required reading for all students of Plato, be they from the world of classics or philosophy.

This book approaches theories about learning in the history of philosophy, especially ancient philosophy.

Dominic Scott compares the 'Republic' and 'Nicomachean Ethics' from a methodological perspective. He argues that Plato and Aristotle distinguish similar levels of argument in the defence of justice, and that they both follow the same approach: Plato because he thinks it will suffice, Aristotle because he thinks there is no need to go beyond it.
