In the early nineteen hundreds, young Kiri Falgren escapes poverty, famine, and a terrifying dark secret in her homeland, Sweden, to conquer life in a small Wisconsin town in America. While fighting the demons of her unspoken past, she finds solace in a forbidden love that threatens to destroy her very existence. Is the glow from a single candle enough to light her way?

Elvene, a solo Space Corps agent, is on a reconnaissance mission when she is ambushed by space marauders: militaristic robotic drones, designed to hunt and kill. She escapes by taking refuge on an uncharted planet, where she discovers the Kiri, an unknown tribe living a subsistence life on an ocean archipelago. They have no knowledge of her world nor her of theirs; but they readily adopt her and give her the title of Ocean Woman. Elvene responds in kind, temporarily forgetting the tribulations of her own world. Inevitably, however, her past catches up with her and endangers the very people who embraced her. The Kiri not only challenge everything Elvene thought she knew about humanity, but provide a friendship and love that leads her to consider the ultimate sacrifice. Paul Mealing lives in Melbourne and, when he is not writing and philosophising, he works as a project controls engineer in the construction industry. His background has been varied and includes share farming in the mallee of NSW and amateur theatre in Canberra. His interests include science, religion and philosophy. He started writing fiction and screenplays in the 1980s, but Elvene is his first published novel. He had stopped writing altogether, but, during an overseas assignment in the US, he got the idea for Elvene while watching a trailer on a video, which had a female protagonist in a Sci-fi anime. He later acknowledged an influence from Mamoru Oshii's 1995 cult classic, Ghost in the Shell (not the trailer or the video he was watching at the time), which, going by an endorsement on the DVD, may have also inspired James Cameron's Dark Angel series.

Hari-Kiri is a definitive text on Japanese ritual suicide, also known as suppuku. To the average westerner, the word hara-kiri conjures up an image of excruciating, self-inflicted pain; of a deep, fatal incision. To the Japanese, this kind of suicide embodies the best qualities of courage, honor, and discipline. Through extensive research, author Jack Seward brings to the English-speaking public a dissertation on the subject that is thoroughly enlightening. Fluent in speaking, reading, and writing Japanese, he was able to glean information from ancient documents—many of them scrolls in the Japanese archives—that few foreigners have seen. The earliest writings on hara-kiri (known more formally as seppuku) are thus revealed, as are the intricate rituals surrounding the ceremony. "The major purpose of this book," says the author, "is to clarify the historical and sociological significance of a unique method of self-destruction." In fulfilling this purpose, author Seward has come up with a definitive work that is sure to arouse interest both as a scholarly effort and as simple, fascinating reading.

When I was arrested by the Chinese military for launching a historic Tibetan Freedom protest, I knew every trial and lesson had been worth it—even if it meant facing a life in prison. After a childhood infused with esoteric Buddhist teachings, I was forged into a global activist through years of witnessing and collaborating in the dissent of women on the front lines of war. From villages in Nepal, to refugee camps in The Democratic Republic of Congo, to the streets of Bogota, Colombia, my initiation into human rights activism was raw and transformative. The bravery of those women bolstered me in my darkest hours of interrogation and torture by the Chinese Police, and it guides me now to share my true story—no matter the repercussions. This is not a tale the Chinese government wants told. During my years working in war zones, I often wondered if I'd have the courage to stand up to tyranny, to lay my life on the line to confront undeniable persecution. In 2007—on the slopes of Mt. Everest—I found out. Take a literary journey with me as I reveal the bumpy road I took to becoming my bravest self—learning to leverage a life of advantage, find a place for my own joy, and cultivate the courage needed to play a distinct role in history.

A Very Old New Story Kiri knows how to ride a horse, play soccer, and dream big dreams—but she is surprised that she can fly without wings. She lands in a mysterious valley surrounded by mountains, where the stars shine all day, a foreboding river bites its tail, and children play around the clock. The hermit in the hills calls this place Internity. As Kiri explores its mountains, she also gets to know her inner voice, IVy, who isn't always helpful when they face the giant fig tree and fight the old hag. Kiri rides an alchemical comet back to the valley and meets a loving teacher, who prepares her and two new friends, Samson and Yutta, for their journey back to Earth. In a library without books, the three friends face mirrors and shadows, and an ancient treasure helps them choose their next life. By the time they cross the big river they know their destiny and who they truly are. Magical and vividly imagined, Kiri Chooses A Life is inspired by a classic tale that dips into images and myths from ancient and current traditions.

Kiri had a reason to be happy. He had found his first new friend at the herd. The name was Begi and they got along well. Things looked like they were about to change in his life for the better but the real adventure is just beginning. Kiri and Begi became good friends, spending lots of time together with Mia lurking around, quietly watching them. Mia was a mammal that lived on the trees, catching bugs and lizards as her prey. She lived by herself and so it was for her own survival that she became very cautious of her surroundings. She came across as a cold and aloof creature but yet Kiri had a certain fondness towards her. He hoped that she could be their friend too. However, Kiri has not yet understood the power of the living thing constantly beating inside his chest. He realized that it is in some way connected to his moods. It could fill him with joy and other times, make him anxious or restless and uncomfortable. He did not know it was something called the Heart and he did not know what it could do or what was its purpose. His compassionate Heart speaks to him directly to his head. He could hear the voice of the Heart in his head and through it, Kiri would continue to spread his love and kindness to all creatures regardless of how they look. It is no surprise that Kiri's tender Heart made him take the first step in doing something that he had never done before. Grandpa Pachy was the closest family Kiri ever had. Old and wise, grandpa Pachy watched Kiri grow and noticed the changes in Kiri, especially Kiri's physical appearance that was looking more and more like a meat-eater. This caused the other dinosaurs in the herd to grow more suspicious of Kiri. Grandpa Pachy was spiritual and always conscious of the changes happening in the world around him. He knew something about Kiri that the other dinosaurs didn't. He knew Kiri was special but he understands that being special usually comes with a bigger purpose. He was not entirely certain of that purpose and how it relates to other dinosaurs in the herd as well as in the rest of the world. So he meditates to find the answers. In the next chapters of this book, a little bit more is known about what Grandpa Pachy saw in Kiri. Also more was revealed about the evil and terrifying Genggan. Genggan and the herd had actually crossed paths in the past. Kiri would not forget his recent encounter with Genggan, the Basilisk in that underground cave. Kiri must tell Grandpa Pachy about Genggan before something bad happens. But would Grandpa Pachy and the rest of the herd believe him? Would they trust him? Doubts set in and his beating Heart beats faster everytime he thinks about it, making him anxious and uncomfortable. Finally, at the end of this book, Kiri would meet for the first time, another new species that would also play a major part in his journey towards his true calling.

Kuji-Kiri means "Nine symbolic cuts." It is a technique that belongs to the esoteric Buddhist tradition. From the outside, it seems to consist in drawing nine lines in the form of a grid, then drawing a symbol on the grid. In fact, it is the setting in place of nine energy structures, that once activated, can empower a concept represented by the drawn symbol over the grid. This symbol then interacts with what seems to be reality, and modifies the structure of the universe according to the desired effects. It is the sacred esoteric science of the oriental mage.

This book bears witness to the author's psychoanalytic journey from the years 1994-1995 to the present, and as such is a completion and a continuation of his previous Psychoanalysis as a Journey of 1999. The book is divided into two parts: one clinical and the other theoretical. The two parts are connected to each other, since the concepts and authors on whom the second (theoretical-clinical) part are focused make up the "tools of the trade" that the author utilizes in the first part to describe his work with patients. In particular, the author describes his work with "M," who is the protagonist of many of these pages. The first (clinical) part contains the text, more or less unmodified, of the analytic paper that the author presented fifteen years ago in order to be appointed a training and supervising analyst.
